

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creepy sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat those parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist, together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say, it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvellous as may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and there had not been even the slightest indication of its return. It now feels as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 137. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rue, O.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

GOOD TEMPLAR'S COLUMN.

EDITED AND MANAGED UNDER THE AUSPICES OF FLAGSTAFF LODGE NO. 14, I. O. G. T.

Contributions of an appropriate nature are solicited for this column, and should be addressed to Box 121, Flagstaff; and all such contributions, however, are subject to approval by the editors.

Lodge meets every Friday evening at the G. A. R. Hall, 8 o'clock. Visiting members invited to attend.

J. GUTHRIE SAVAGE, C. T.
H. R. DAVIS, Secretary.

The proper adjustment of the relations existing between the community and the individual is the problem of civilization.

From the nature of things it must be admitted that the welfare of the community is paramount to the advancement of individual interest, and yet it is sometimes difficult to decide just where the dividing line between the rights of the community and those of the individual should be drawn.

That point, however, would be the goal of economic organization, where the greatest good would accrue to the community, and where, at the same time, the greatest advantages would be secured to each member of society, for the development of that individuality which constitutes the true man and citizen.

To every individual there belong certain rights, which are so fundamental and essential that our laws term them natural rights.

These are, the right to life, personal liberty, the possession of property, and the right to "pursue his own true and substantial happiness." To secure the enjoyment of these rights, governments are instituted, for without government there can be no rights.

Right to life does not mean, however, that a person has an absolute right to dispose of his life as best pleases him, for the community has a property in the life of each one of its members, which must ever be a first consideration. The proof of this higher claim is found in the fact that society has at all times asserted its right to punish with death the violation of certain provisions made for the general welfare; and without regard, at this time, to the moral question involved, the fact presented illustrates one of the ways in which society exercises its prerogative for the protection of the whole against the arbitrary will of the individual.

Right of personal liberty does not mean the right to do absolutely as one pleases, but it means that every person has a right to do as he pleases so long as the rights of every other member of society are respected. Were not these restrictions self-imposed for the general welfare, then the life of every person, his liberty and his property, would alike be subject to the uncontrolled passions, and at the disposal, of every other member of society, and the strong and the vicious would rule to the exclusion of the just and the moral, which would be the negation of government and community welfare. For under such conditions each person could assert practically the right to do as he might please, and it is easy to be seen that civilization would necessarily be at an ebb where such rule, or rather lack of rule, would obtain.

If then, it is necessary to civilization and moral welfare, that persons should resign some of their natural rights, or rather natural desires and powers, in order that possession of things merely physical, may be insured, it must follow, logically, that every member of society is under the same obligation with reference to rights and duties purely moral.

In every well regulated city or town it is incumbent upon each citizen to keep his premises free from all nature of refuse, because it is positively known that such matter creates conditions which are favorable for the production of disease germs; and as the health and convenience of the community are to be first considered, these nuisances may be removed as a common right.

The same rights may also extend to guard the moral health of the community, and measured by its importance, as compared with the physical health, which is also important and moral, such rights must receive additional sanction. So that from the foregoing it may be stated as a principle that society has the same right to abate or remove conditions which generate moral disease as it has to guard the physical health, by proper legislation.

Every business and institution must be judged by its effects. And further, whatever exists in community, either as an institution or a business, is in some degree representative of that community, as a whole; and each member of society is in a measure responsible therefor.

If then, any business has the effect of making men less competent as citizens, more selfish, less careful of the rights of others, less respectful and respectful in his conduct; of encouraging a disrespect for our institutions and laws, and of furnishing a large majority of our indigent and criminals; such a business before any bar of justice must be adjudged a moral nuisance, and by common society can and ought to remove it for its own protection.

Each citizen is, by reason of his relation, the natural guardian of our institutions, and it is incumbent upon him to study the social conditions with which he is surrounded, to assist those in authority, and where abuses exist to exercise his prerogative for the removal of such evils and the establishment of right institutions in their stead.

The sad occurrence of last Sunday morning fully illustrates the truths above set forth. From its beginning this community has suffered from conditions which can only lead up to results of this nature; and for some months past, if current report may be believed, matters in our community have been directly tending toward some such culmination.

There can be no doubt as to the culpability of our peace officers in regard to these matters. And some share of responsibility ought to be laid upon them for this occurrence, as they have frequently of late permitted fights and brawls to go on without even a show of interference.

But there is also a responsibility which must be borne by the private citizen as well, for his failure to insist that lawlessness, and those conditions which tend to produce it, shall be abolished, or at least held in check in our midst. It is a question why saloons should be allowed to remain open at any and all hours of the night, breeding disorder and rendering men unfit for their daily labor; why our officers should permit the exercise of violence by the patrons of this institution, especially if directed against the Mexican members of our community; and why law-loving and law-abiding citizens of Flagstaff should be compelled to bear the occasional recurrence of such scenes as that of Sunday morning, and the continual annoyance of petty acts of ruffianism, which are the indirect result, at least, of the degrading and demoralizing conditions which surround us. Yet it certainly is true, that so long as no protest is made so long as inaction is the policy of the better element, just so long we may expect these things to continue.

Among the technical journals "Electric Power" surely stands in the front rank, as anyone will be convinced by a perusal of the September number. A new feature has been introduced which will prove of great value to the readers of electrical literature. The announcement is made that beginning with this number "Electric Power" will contain a concise synopsis of the electro-technical subjects that have appeared in the technical press during the month preceding the issue, and this we feel confident will make the magazine an important volume of reference. This department will be under the charge of Mr. Max Osterberg, a clever writer and a graduate of Columbia college. In this number Dr. Nichols concludes his valuable article on "The Galvanometer," and among the other articles are "A Question of Public Policy," "Portsmouth (England) Electric Lighting Station," "Cost of Producing Electrical Energy," "Electricity in Mining," and the usual notes on patents, book reviews, etc. The September number seems larger than usual, and the illustrations and portraits are excellent.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION

— OF —
The Arizona Land and Stock Co.

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS: That we, J. H. Hoskins, Jr., G. W. Wallace and B. N. Freeman have voluntarily associated ourselves together for the purpose of forming a corporation, under the laws of Arizona, entitled, "Corporations in General," Revised Statutes of Arizona, 1887, and have adopted and do hereby certify to the following articles of incorporation, viz:

ARTICLE I.
That the name of this corporation shall be "The Arizona Land & Stock Company," and its principal place of transacting business shall be at Flagstaff, Coconino County, Arizona.

ARTICLE II.
That the general nature of the business to be transacted by this corporation shall be a general live stock business; manufacturing; dealing in securities and loans; in merchandise; in lands, timber and water rights; and in other personal and real property, and to do all things necessary or incident to the business.

ARTICLE III.
That the authorized capital of this corporation shall be fifty thousand dollars, divided into five hundred shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, and the conditions upon which the stock of this corporation is to be paid in and issued shall be either for cash, or for real or personal property, at fair and reasonable valuations, and the times at which said stock shall be paid in, shall be ten thousand or more dollars at this date, and the remainder thereof at the times required by the board of directors of this corporation, within not exceeding five years from the date hereof.

ARTICLE IV.
That this corporation shall begin on the 5th day of September, A. D. 1894, and shall terminate twenty years from said date.

ARTICLE V.
That the affairs of this corporation shall be conducted by a board of directors consisting of five stockholders, elected annually on the first Monday after the first day of January, who shall hold office until their successors are duly elected, qualified, and enter upon the duties of their office, and B. N. Freeman, G. W. Wallace, J. H. Hoskins, Jr., H. E. Campbell and C. G. Freeman are hereby appointed such directors until their successors are duly elected, qualified, and enter upon the duties of their office.

ARTICLE VI.
That the highest amount of indebtedness or liability to which this corporation shall at any time subject itself, shall be double the amount of the then paid-in capital.

ARTICLE VII.
That private property of stockholders of this corporation shall be exempt from corporate debts.

ARTICLE VIII.
That the board of directors of this corporation shall adopt a code of by-laws for the government of this corporation and the conduct of its affairs, and creating the offices thereof.

ARTICLE IX.
That the corporate seal of this company shall be a circle with the word "seal" in the center, and the words "The Arizona Land and Stock Company" around the margin. In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands and seals, this 25th day of September, A. D. 1894.
